HOW DID THE FUND PERFORM LAST YEAR AND WHAT AFFECTED ITS PERFORMANCE?

For the year ended December 31, 2024, the Fund (i) outperformed its primary benchmark index, FTSE Global Core Infrastructure 50/50 Total Return Index; and (ii) underperformed its secondary benchmark index, Dow Jones Brookfield Global Infrastructure Index TR, and its broad-based benchmark index, the MSCI World Index.

WHAT FACTORS INFLUENCED PERFORMANCE

During the period, midstream was the leading sector contributor to relative returns. Overweight positions to outperforming North American midstream operators contributed as the sector continued to post gains. Gas utilities also contributed, where positive security selection was attributed to outperforming overweight positions in the U.S. and Asia Pacific. Among integrated utilities/renewables, positive stock selection was driven by a combination of overweight positions in select outperforming U.S. utilities.

Conversely, towers were the leading detractor from relative returns during the period. An overweight position in a European tower operator, as well as security selection among U.S. operators detracted from relative performance. Within the airports sector, overweight positions in underperforming Asian airport operators detracted from relative returns during the period. Lastly, within the electricity transmission & distribution sector, underperformance was primarily due to overweight positions in a Brazilian utility, as well as a Houston-based operator.

POSITIONING

In our view, the economic backdrop for infrastructure continues to improve. Steady economic growth, a normalizing interest rate environment and sector-specific demand drivers serve as tailwinds for the asset class. We continue to believe the current investment environment is supportive of outsized earnings growth and investment returns for companies that own and operate the backbone of the global economy. We believe many subsectors across the listed infrastructure universe stand to benefit from increases are driven by the massive capital investment required to upgrade the U.S. electrical grid to accommodate increasing power demand from nearshoring, datacenters, and the energy transition.
